

What do Eastern Washington and the Desert Southwest have in common?

Sunshine and spring cycling.

But that is where the comparison ends.

The Southwest may be warm, but it cannot equal the diverse terrain within a day's ride of the mighty Columbia River. With its dry desert plateaus, forested mountain passes, and high altitude lakes, the Eastern Cascades have it all.

A Festival of Cycling in the Columbia Basin

Join like-minded riders in Wenatchee, Washington April 26-30 for a cycling adventure you will never forget. Build your early season base mileage with routes that match your goals and abilities. Relax and enjoy delicious dinners, while sharing stories and ideas about riding. Get a good night's sleep, get up, and do it all over again.

Register today. Space is limited.

For more information and registration visit:
<http://www.northwestcrank.com>

Ready To Ride™
Mind. Body. Bike.

Media Sponsor

Hosted by